

I firmly beleive the FCC needs to continue to regulate broadband service. The potential for monopoly is too great and needs to be watched. Independant service providers are the lifeblood of many many internet users. Continuing firm regulation is needed to allow them to provide options for those of us that don't care for all the extra unwanted spam and other bs that comes from dealing with a large service provider directly.